Certified Graduate Remodeler (CGR)

CGR is the only professional designation program in the industry that emphasizes business management as the key to success in the remodeling business. Currently there are more than 1,000 CGRs and another 2,000 working toward certification. To become a CGR, remodelers are required to take the Professional Remodeler Experience Profile (PREP), an assessment tool that determines their personal course of study, and to complete the prescribed number of courses. Council members receive a substantial discount on CGR fees.

Certified Aging-in-Place Specialist (CAPS) Certification

CAPS is the result of the work of the NAHBR remodelers — in conjunction with the NAHB Research Center, NAHB Seniors Housing Council and AARP. The three-day training program equips graduates with the technical, customer service and marketing skills required to effectively service the burgeoning market for aging-in-place home modifications. Demographic trends indicate that home owners who plan to stay in their homes as they get older instead of making other housing accommodations are one of the fastest growing segments of the residential remodeling market. Many of these households can be expected to call on remodelers to adapt their homes to their changing needs and lifestyles to maintain their independence. Learn more about CAPS certification from the COBA Remodelers.
